Students seeking performance track honors will take MUSC 470.

Student Learning Outcomes

A student majoring in Music will

1. By listening widely to different musical practices, styles, and eras, develop and apply critical listening abilities and aural skills to support and inform listening.
2. Through practicing functional musical skills suited to our times, demonstrate the ability to make meaningful sounds, to read and realize musical notations, to use music software and electronic instruments, and to play keyboard instruments.
3. Collaborate with others by performing in an ensemble.
4. Appraise the historical, cultural, ethnic, economic, and aesthetic contexts of music making and listening in different times and places; explain and defend the contexts and meanings of one's own music making.
5. Communicate in music; communicate about music: use critical thinking and analytical skills to communicate effectively both orally and in writing.
