Research and Writing (THBR)

THBR 533 Theological Research and Writing for ESL Students (3)
This course is designed to help international student writers succeed in writing, editing, and completing a large research project specific to their discipline. This could be a research paper, journal article, literature review, dissertation chapter, grant proposal, or other relevant document. The course provides intensive help with grammar, idiomatic phrasing, and overall clarity for writers whose native language is not English. The instructor will collaborate with the Language Center of the University for additional resources.

THBR 534 Theological Research and Writing for Theses (1)
Prerequisite: THBR 533.

THBR 594 Directed Readings (1 to 4)
A research and writing topic developed by the student and a School of Theology faculty member to meet an educational goal not met through existing courses.